Annual holiday program canceled due to pandemic

Due to concerns about the health and well-being of the public during the COVID-19 pandemic, the Johnston County War Memorial Committee has announced that there will be no formal Memorial Day program this year.

The annual event has for years been held at the Johnston County War Memorial on South Capitol Avenue in Tishomingo, sometimes during the morning hours and sometimes as a candlelight program after sundown.

But with the pandemic still underway and fears of a possible spike in infections despite the recent easing of some restrictions, committee member Paul Roan told the Sentinel on Monday that the board felt canceling the traditional program - which would have taken place next Monday, May 25 - was the best possible course of action.

"We decided that we do not want to expose the public to any possible danger or health risks," Roan said. "We hope to be able to return to our usual program next year, and also to be able to hold our traditional Veterans Day program in November."

Although the formal program has been canceled, Roan said the committee still plans to honor Johnston County's fallen military members at the memorial site next Monday.

"At 9 a.m. on Monday morning, the committee will meet and place wreaths at each of the granite monuments at the war memorial," Roan said. "We will also lower the flag to half-staff as is customary."

In addition, committee member Vickie Parks will also provide the traditional reading of the names of Johnston County's fallen military members.

While the formal program will not take place as usual, Roan said the public is invited to attend the wreath laying and name reading ceremony that morning.

"Anyone who attends will have to bring their own lawn chairs," he said. "Also, the public will be required to maintain social distancing."

At sundown, committee members will return to the memorial and raise the flag back to full-staff in keeping with proper U.S. Flag etiquette.

Holiday brings early deadlines

The Johnston County Sentinel will be closed next Monday, May 25, in observance of the 2020 Memorial Day holiday. As a result, a change in next week's deadline schedule has been announced.

All deadlines for classified ads, display ads, legal publications, community news and obituaries have been moved up to 5 p.m. this Friday, May 22, due to Monday's holiday closure.

Next week's edition of the Sentinel will go to press at the regular schedule, hitting store shelves in Tishomingo on Wednesday in the usual manner.

Mail subscription copies will be sent out the same day, and subscribers should receive their copies as usual.

This year more than ever, the staff of the J*ohnston County Sentinel* wishes our readers a safe, happy and healthy Memorial Day holiday.

BUCK RAINEY'S LEGACY

OSCAR PROVIDES NEW HOME FOR LOCAL SCHOLAR'S WESTERN COLLECTION

The late Bill G. "Buck" Rainey displays some of the books he wrote about the heyday of the B-western, as well as several items from his extensive collection of memorabilia. That collection will now reside at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in California. (Photo courtesy of Ken Layne Rainey)

By John A. Small
Managing Editor

In 1939, when he was but a lad of 12, Bill Rainey accompanied his parents on a trip to the San Francisco World's Fair.

It was a day of great fun and adventure, and like many great adventures it culminated in the acquisition of a priceless treasure: an autographed photo of Bill's favorite movie star, western hero Buck Jones, which his parents bought for him.

That treasure was obtained for the cost of a mere nickel. But for young Bill - who, as an adult, would take his favorite movie star's nickname as his own - it was indeed invaluable. And it marked the beginning of a lifelong hobby that would bring him great joy personally, but also have a tremedous impact upon his life professionally.

That hobby will now be part of perhaps the most famous movie-related collections to be found anywhere, thanks to the work and devotion of Rainey's son Layne.

But first, with the readers' kind permission, a moment of personal reminiscence:

In 1999, while working as news editor for the Johnston County Capital-Democrat, this reporter spent the better part of an entire day in the Tishomingo home of Dr. Bill G. "Buck" Rainey and his wife Rosalva, conducting an interview for what would prove to be one of my favorite assignments during my many years at the C-D.

The subject: the publication of Rainey's 14th book, Serials and Series: A World Filmography, 1912-1956. As a lifelong fan of the old-time movie serials myself - I'd spent many a Sunday morning as a child sitting on my father's knee watching the old Buster Crabbe Flash Gordon serials on television - it was that rare kind of assignment that appealed to me both on a professional and personal level. (See this week's "Small Talk" column on Page 2.)

The interview itself was fun and informative, and I listened in rapt attention as Dr. Rainey shared both his expertise of the subject matter and his memories as a fan and a collector. I remember in particular the discussion we had about legendary singing cowboy (and one-time Ravia resident) Gene Autry's most unusual film project: the 1935 science fiction western serial The Phantom Empire, a favorite of both of us. I also enjoyed pouring through some of the books in Rainey's vast research library, a couple of which he was kind enough to let me borrow.

But what I recall most about that day was the opportunity to personally view a portion of the vast collection of movie memorabilia Rainey had collected over the years, beginning with that photo of Buck Jones purchased for a nickel six decades earlier. There were other photos and movie stills - some of them autographed - letters he had received from a number of movie stars, even a few canceled checks signed by some of them.

I remember asking him if he planned on eventually donating these artifacts to a museum. He just sort of smiled and shrugged. "I don't know if anybody would be interested in them," he commented sadly.

As it turns out, some-

Small Talk

John A. Small

Once upon a time…

It's Saturday afternoon, and there's no place else to be but at the movies. Your mother gives you a little money (and maybe a sandwich to eat in case you run out of candy), and off you go with your friends to the Majestic, the Bijou or whatever name is on the sign outside the local movie house in your hometown.

There's a double feature, naturally – who ever heard of paying money just to see one movie? Maybe the first flick is a western featuring Ken Maynard or John Wayne; the second may be the latest Frankenstein picture, or perhaps a Marx Brothers comedy. Love scenes are greeted with a steady chorus of groans and boos - "Aww, that's just sissy stuff!" - but pie fights and fight scenes have you and your pals jumping up and down in your chairs with delight, whooping and hollering as if you were right there taking part in the action.

After the first feature there's a Three Stooges short; a cartoon featuring Bugs Bunny or Donald Duck or that new comic book hero who's all the rage, Superman; then maybe some coming attractions and a brief newsreel – and then, before the start of the second feature, you have the serial.

You remember what chapter it is, because you've seen every one of them to this point. Last week, the hero or heroine was left in an absolutely impossible situation: trapped in a burning building filled with dynamite; unconscious in a car about to speed over a cliff, on a spaceship about to be blasted by a laser cannon. You even saw that building explode, the car topple into eternity, the spaceship blasted out of the sky.

What you didn't see then, but what you do see as this week's episode begins, is a miraculous escape from last week's deathtrap. The hero jimmys open a window and gets away just before the building explodes. The heroine wakes up and jumps from the car just before it careens over the cliff.

The escape from the spaceship is equally predictable, but that's okay; the next 15 minutes are crammed full of solid action and adventure before the hero or heroine again falls into the clutches of the villain. Escape is once more out of the question as the episode shrieks to a halt; come back next week and see them escape anyway!

Week after week, the kids came back. The acting may not have been of Oscar calibre, the sets may have tackier than a third grade Sunday school drama, but the action never stopped and that's what really mattered.

That was the world that people like my father and the late Bill "Buck" Rainey grew up in. And I won't lie to you, there were times during my childhood that I found myself wishing I had grown up during those days, as well. By the time I came along in 1963, it was a much different world. Television had long since changed the movie industry beyond recognition, and the serials had gone the way of the dinosaur.

Of course, it was thanks to television that I became acquainted with those old serials. As a wee nipper - late 1960s, early 1970s - my father would wake me up early on Sunday mornings so we could watch the weekly airings of the old Buster Crabbe Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers serials on WGN-TV. That would be followed by episodes of The Lone Ranger and The Cisco Kid, two characters who themselves had been heroes of the serials before becoming TV icons in the 1950s...

Of course, that was back in the days when WGN was still a station worth watching. But, as usual, that is a discussion for another time.

And the serials of my father's youth found their way into my consciousness in other ways, too. A trip to the local Sears or K-Mart stores there in Kankakee would always include a visit to the photography section, where there were displays of 8-millimeter home movie versions - most of them marketed by Castle Films - of some of the old movies Dad had loved as a kid. I remember him buying 8-millimeter versions of a couple of Errol Flynn classics, The Adventures of Robin Hood and The Dawn Patrol, as well as some old cartoons.

But those store displays also included home movie versions of the serials, a few of which also made their way into Dad's collection. Some of them were serials based on the old comic book and comic strip characters: Flash and Buck, to be sure, but also Captain America, Superman, Batman, Dick Tracy and Captain Marvel - the REAL Captain Marvel, that is, the young boy who turned into the full-grown superhero by yelling "Shazam!" in the days before copyright laws and the team of attorneys at Marvel Comics forced Cap's owners to change his name...

But there were scores of other severely edited serials to be found in those Castle Films displays. Tarzan was there, in the guise of the same Buster Crabbe who had played both Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers. Gene Autry was there, too, as was John Wayne and Ray "Crash" Corrigan. (I'll give some of you younger readers a moment to look up Ray "Crash" Corrigan...)

In time some of the other serials from my father's childhood started showing up on a couple of the local UHF television stations - mostly in the wee hours of the morning, though, which meant I rarely got the opportunity to see them. But I finally got my chance to catch them in the mid-1980s, thanks to the increasing popularity of the home video market.

One of my favorites was a serial called Hurricane Express, starring a young John Wayne as a two-fisted adventurer trying to solve a murder and save a railroad line. And then, of course, there was Gene Autry's masterpiece: 1935's The Phantom Empire, a bizarre western-science fiction hybrid that pitted Autry against invaders from the underground kingdom of Murania, who wanted to take Melody Ranch away from Autry so that the surface dwellers would not discover the subterranean civilization. To do this, they attempted to keep Autry away from his radio show so that his contract would be canceled and he would not have the money to meet the mortgage! (In one episode - no kidding! - Autry was even killed, but was quickly brought back to life by one of the Muranians' strange machines.)

By the time I finally discovered The Phantom Empire in my late 20s, I had long been an avowed serial fan just like my father. Just one more precious gift he gave me in our all-too-short time together...

And my love of the format was no doubt aided by the fact that, despite the demise of the theatrical genre, the serials' thrill-a-minute spirit had continued to live on in various modern works, from the "tune in tomorrow" cliffhangers of the Adam West Batman TV series to the Flash Gordon-style opening crawls of the Star Wars films, and in certain television shows that specialize in long-running serialized story arcs.

Let's face it: any time your favorite NCIS or CW superhero series ends its season with their heroes in danger and a black screen with the words "To be continued," it's a tip of the hat to those thrilling days of yesteryear.

Granted, it's not quite the same as it was on those Saturdays of long ago. But it's nice to know that, in these uncertain times, some things haven't changed...

Life in black and white in today's United States

By Tom Lokey
Sentinel Co-Publisher

"You have no idea," was part of the statement made to me by a black Pepsi-Cola delivery man in 1991 during the riots following the police beating of Rodney King in 1991 in Los Angeles. I was in management for Ralphs Supermarkets in Los Angeles.

The driver was very upset at the whole situation, especially the rioting and looting being done in the name of social justice.

He also went on to try to explain to a white man (me) what it was to be a black person in these United States, even in the progressive West Coast and Los Angeles area.

Backing up to a prior day and time, around 1974, a friend of mine and I walked in and out of housing under construction by the Chickasaw Nation, just west of the Tishomingo High School.

It was most likely the weekend or late in the day, as no construction workers were there.

As young teenagers at that time, no one asked us what we were doing or tried to stop us from entering or leaving the houses under construction.

Moving forward, late 1970s or early 1980s, Moore, Okla. With another friend whose father was in the construction business, I visited houses under construction in Moore.

While there, no one asked us what we were doing or stopped us for being in those homes under construction.

Moving forward, 2018, Mary and I visited construction sites of homes under construction in southern California with our friends from there (none of us black). Our friends were considering having a new home built (they started on building it later that year).

Ahmaud Arbery, 25, an avid jogger, was seen on camera going into a house under construction. No one knows why, but in one theory that emerged, the property owner suggested that Arbery may have visited the house to get a drink of water before continuing to jog. Mr. Arbery was black.

He died from two shotgun blasts as he continued his jog. The two men who shot him did not own the property that he had visited.

On that same security camera over time, other people, not black, were seen going into and out of this home that is under construction.

I have no idea. No idea how it is to be black and living even today in these United States.

Passage of SB 1888 will benefit county

By John A. Small
Managing Editor

The chairman of the Johnston County Board of Commissioners expressed his appreciation Monday to the state legislature for passing a bill he said would provide operational funds equally to all 77 Oklahoma counties as they work to recover from the financial impact of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Later, however, it was determined that the funding would not be distributed quite the way Commissioner Mike Thompson had initially believed.

During the commissioners' regular weekly meeting Monday morning, Thompson reported that he had been informed of the passage of Senate Bill 1888 late last Friday, May 15, by Speaker of the House Charles McCall.

Thompson publicly thanked McCall, as well as State Senators Frank Simpson and David Bullard and Rep. J.J. Humphrey, for their work in passing the bill.

"They really worked hard on our behalf and I want them to know how much I appreciate it," Thompson said.

Thompson, currently serving his final term as Johnston County's District 2 commissioner, explained that SB 1888 called for the distribution of 35 percent of monthly apportionments from the County Improvements for Roads and Bridges (CIRB) program during Fiscal Year 2021 into each county's Highway Fund for maintenance and operations.

The board of directors of the Association of County Commissioners of Oklahoma (ACCO) and ACCO's Legislative Committee had adopted a plan which would have provided an equal distribution of those funds to all 77 counties - $45,000 per county, or $15,000 per each commissioners district.

"This will be the first time during my career as a commissioner that CIRB money has been split evenly between all 77 counties," Thompson said. "The money will be paid per month over a one-year period to help the counties make up for the shortfall they're going to experience as a result of the pandemic.

"It's not going to work miracles... I think the dominoes are just starting to fall and we won't know for awhile just how bad things are going to get. But it will certainly help."

Later that afternoon, however, the commissioners' office provided the Sentinel with a copy of a letter regarding the passage of SB 1888 that hd been received from Randy Robinson, executive director and transportation engineer for the Oklahoma Cooperative Circuit Engineering Districts Board (OCCEDB).

In that letter, Robinson explained that the amount of funding being distributed to each county would not be equal as Thompson had originally believed.

"On Friday night, at the will of the Legislature, the distribution formula was changed to a current statutory formula that is used to apportion parts of the gasoline, diesel and special funds taxes to the County Highway Fund," Robinson wrote.

"This formula is one-third county area, one-third certified county road miles, one-third county rural population (defined as including all cities with less than 5,000 population based on the latest Federal Decennial Census)… The bill is waiting on Governor's signature."

Included with the letter was a file showing the actual approximate yearly amounts per county as approved by the legislature.

According to that table, Johnston County's total additional revenue from the CIRB funding during FY 2021

Board of Trustees votes to resume cut-off of utilities

By Matthew Cravatt and Dee Fry
Sentinel Correspondents

They voted to halt the temporary cessation of utility cut-offs for nonpayment. This would allow for water cut-offs on or about the 25th of this month.

The move was made because very few utility customers had a need to utilize the provision, in combination with state proclamations ending, and businesses opening and calling employees back to work.

"We'll just have to keep an eye on things so if we need to halt utility cut-offs again, we can get right to it," Mayor Ricky Kreger said, when the 4–1 vote to resume RWPA procedures passed.

The Ravia Senior Citizens Center regular Thursday dinner at the Ravia Community Center, located at 202 E. 2nd Street, will have carryout only this week, around noon, to help prevent COVID-19 spread.

The Ravia Community Center will remain closed to the public, and pick–ups will be made at the door or curbside, should crowding occur.

Mayor Kreger reminds area residents to pen or leash your dogs to protect your neighbors, other pets and livestock.

Also, keep an eye out for your neighbors and public property. Some people have chosen to partake in misdeeds during the public health emergency, and you may need to call 911 on the behalf of family, friends and community.

And now news from Dee...

By Jerry Blackerby
Sentinel Correspondent

Milburn First Baptist Church met May 17 for church service only in the auditorium.

Families sat together with social distance between families. We will meet again next Sunday, May 24, the same way.

We will either meet at the Milburn Community Center, if the contractors are finished, or at my house. We meet on the first Thursday evening of each month.

If you have prayer requests, please let me know. We know God answers prayer and have had many good reports from people we are praying for.

If you know of friends or neighbors needing prayer, please send me the requests. I am sure that many requests are not reaching our churches, especially with many not having services.

Milburn School:

Milburn School had a drive-in senior graduation ceremony on May 15.

The state board passed a resolution to close all school buildings for the remainder of the year. The teachers are working to develop distance learning lesson plans that are equitable and beneficial to student learning.

The school will continue to run meal routes daily, as well as meal grab-and-go.

At this time, all extracurricular events are canceled until the CDC loosens restrictions.

When I am informed of any changes, I will put the information in this column.

Milburn Public Schools have announced that the office, cafeteria and food bank will be open Monday through Thursday, from 8 to 11 a.m.

Absentee ballot application deadline is June 24

Voters in Johnston County who want to have absentee ballots mailed to them for the June 30 Johnston County Primary election should apply now, County Election Board Secretary B.J. Wheaton said this week.

Although the County Election Board can accept applications for absentee ballots until 5 p.m. on Wednesday, June 24, Wheaton urged voters who want to vote by absentee ballot to apply early.

Absentee ballot application forms are available at the Johnston County Election Board office, located at 705 W. Main Street in Tishomingo, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

A print form can also be downloaded at that address.

Ballots must be in the hands of County Election Board officials by 7 p.m. on Election Day to be counted.

Wheaton said any registered voter may vote by absentee ballot in any election in which he or she is eligible to vote.

However, a voter must be registered and reside at an address within the geographical boundaries of a school district or a municipality to be eligible to vote in school district or municipal elections.

It is not necessary to give a reason for voting absentee.

"While anyone can vote absentee without giving a reason, the law still provides several advantages to absentee voters in some categories," Wheaton said.

By stating one of the following reasons on their applications, absentee voters can activate special conditions that make it easier for them to use absentee ballots. The reasons are:

• Voters who are physically incapacitated and voters who care for physically incapacitated persons who cannot be left unattended may vote absentee.

They may apply only by mail, by fax, by e-mail, online or via an agent who is at least 16 years of age and who is not employed by or related within the third degree of consanguinity or affinity to any person whose name appears on the ballot.

• Voters who are confined to nursing homes in the county may vote absentee. An Absentee Voting Board actually goes to the nursing home a few days before the election, sets up a small polling place and allows these persons to vote under circumstances similar to those at a regular precinct polling place.

They may apply only by mail, by fax, by e-mail, online or via an agent who is at least 16 years of age and who is not employed by or related within the third degree of consanguinity or affinity to any person whose name appears on the ballot.

• Military personnel and residents of the county living overseas and the spouses and dependents of each group are eligible to receive absentee ballots. These voters may apply only by mail, fax or e-mail.

Sooner Pharmacy Good Health Tips

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is requiring a new boxed warning—the agency's most prominent warning—on certain prescription insomnia drugs to better ensure patients and their health care professionals have the information they need when considering use of these medicines. The boxed warning follows several reports of rare, but serious injuries and deaths resulting from various complex sleep behaviors after taking these medicines. These complex sleep behaviors may include sleepwalking, sleep driving and engaging in other activities while not fully awake, such as unsafely using a stove. The new warnings will be required for eszopiclone (Lunesta), zaleplon (Sonata) and zolpidem (Ambien, Ambien CR, Edluar, Intermezzo, and Zolpimist).

Allergy shots (subcutaneous immunotherapy) have been available for more than 100 years. Allergy tablets (sublingual immunotherapy) have been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use in the United States for four years. A new study in Annals of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology shows that most American allergists now prescribe the tablets for some patients to treat certain allergies. Allergy tablets are available to treat northern grass pollens, Timothy grass pollen, ragweed and house dust mite. The northern grass pollens and the Timothy grass pollen tablets are both approved down to age 5 years and the other two for those 18 years and older. The tablets differ from allergy shots because after the first dose is given in an allergist's office, they can be taken at home. The tablets are placed under the tongue and dissolve. body was. "Somebody" being only the most famous movie organization in the world.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (AMPAS) - the same organization behind the annual Academy Awards, a.k.a. the Oscars - will soon become the official home of the Buck Rainey Collection. It will become a permanent part of the Academy's compendium of the history of the movies - a treasure trove which, among other things, also includes some 14 million motion pictures as well as copies of the 17 books about B-westerns that Rainey wrote before his death in 2009.

The collection is being donated by one of Rainey's three sons, Ken Layne Rainey, who resides in California with his husband, J. Michael Lee M.D. It is a donation which AMPAS representatives say the organization is proud and happy to accept - but also one that nearly did not happen. Hard as it might be for fellow aficionados to believe, the Buck Rainey Collection very nearly became lost to history altogether.

But thanks to Layne and his mother Rosalva, who died earlier this year, the collection he'd spent a lifetime amassing was saved from the scrap heap. Literally.

"The collection was at my mom's house until just before she passed in March," Layne Rainey told the Sentinel. "My brothers almost dumped the collection in the Tishomingo dump a few months back, and I intervened and asked Mama if I could have it."

Buck Rainey's love of old western movies was such that he named all three of his sons after some of his favorite cowboy heroes.

Layne's first name - Ken - comes from Ken Maynard, who named his on-screen horse Tarzan after Edgar Rice Burroughs' famed jungle hero. Brother Tim was named after Tim Holt, a popular Western star during the 1940s and early '50s whose credits also include co-starring with Humphrey Bogart in The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.

And Rex Rainey's name is derived from two of his father's favorite western actors: Rex Lease, star of the 1936 film serial Custer's Last Stand; and Rex Bell, who appeared in such films as Saddle Aces (1935) and also served as the 21st lieutenant governor of Nevada.

But of the three boys, only Layne seemed to inherit his father's interest in those thrilling days of yesteryear.

"Neither of my brothers have ever been interested in or involved in Daddy's passion," Layne acknowledged. "They didn't have any interest in maintaining the collection, nor did they ever go with my parents to conventions."

For Layne, however, his father's love for the B-westerns proved a bonding experience - especially after Buck was severely injured in a head-on collision northeast of Roff on April 23, 1991. His injuries left Buck confined to a wheelchair for the rest of his life, but it did little to dampen his enthusiasm for his lifelong hobby.

"After my father's accident and he was paralyzed, my husband Mike and I drove him all over the country to see stars and attend conventions," Layne recalled. "We would go with him, for example, to visit Mrs. Buck Jones in Hollywood. She was 105 and very intact mentally. Since I live in the L.A. area, Mike and I became friends with Dorothy Howe and she spent holidays at our house when my parents were there.

"Mike took Daddy to the Academy several years ago, and the staff was so thrilled to meet my father that they pulled all of his books from their reference shelves and had him autograph each one."

That experience later proved beneficial as Layne worked to find a home for his father's collection.

"I had been racking my brain every day since Daddy died over what to do with the collection or who to give it to," Layne said. Among the organizations considered as a possible repository for his father's memorabilia was the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum - formerly known as the Cowboy Hall of Fame - in Oklahoma City.

It should have been the perfect match: Buck had been a lifetime member of the Cowboy Hall of Fame, and had been invited to speak at some of its film festivals and sit in on panel discussions on various western-related topics over the years.

But Layne's inquiry there was met with a most unexpected - some might even say ludicrous - response.

"The lady in collections there did not seem to even realize what a movie still was," Layne recalled incredulously.

But Layne soon received a more positive reception from the AMPAS, in no small part because of its familiarity with Buck's work as a movie scholar. He shared with the Sentinel a copy of an e-mail he received in which Kristine Kruger, longtime head of the AMPAS' National Film Information Service, shared memories of Rainey's visit to their offices.

"I was on the reference desk and this trio came in: Buck Rainey, in a wheelchair, his wife and his son," Kruger wrote. "He didn't announce himself, he just began asking questions about cowboy films and I asked if he was Buck Rainey.

"Janet Lorenz and I dealt with Mr. Rainey for years, who wrote us (no e-mails) asking for materials on cowboy actors and actresses, serial stars, etc… He was very laconic in his letters and very laconic in person."

Layne is currently in the process of reviewing each piece of his father's collection, so that the artifacts can be turned over to their new home. Among the pieces he ran across while discussing the project with the Sentinel was a 1973 letter from Gene Autry in response to a request for photographs from The Phantom Empire; and the framed copy of that Buck Jones photo that started it all.

But Layne admitted that he is holding a few choice pieces for his own personal collection, which his father also had a hand in starting.

"Thirty-five years ago he gave me stills from the folks that my brothers and I were named after, and a few others autographed to me personally that I had framed and matted," Layne said. "In addition I have framed a couple of dozen stills that were sentimental to me, or of stars I had actually met myself.

"For example, for years my parents would take me to the Dallas Summer Musicals or Casa Manana in Fort Worth and we would see Ruta Lee perform in theatre in the round. I remember seeing Carol Burnett and Paul Lynde in Dallas (and) I got to meet people like Buster Crabbe and listen to Daddy interviewing him."

In a sense, there were two Buck Raineys. One was the longtime college professor who taught at East Central University for 26 years and at Murray State College for another 10, and by his own admission in that 1999 interview had "more degrees than you can shake a stick at."

The other Buck was the lifelong movie fan and historian who became a familiar face at conventions and, in his own way, was as revered by aficionados of the B-western as Stan Lee was to comic book fans. Layne remembers both sides of his father with great affection.

"In everyday life he was a non-assuming, quiet, very shy professor of business education and head of the department at East Central," Layne recalled. "But at conventions and around his group of friends in the industry, he came alive.

B-western legend Ken Maynard, for whom Buck Rainey's son and the custodian of his legacy was named. (Photo courtesy of Ken Layne Rainey)

"He would be bold about introducing himself to stars and he became quite chatty and engaging. His personality would really come out."

Buck Rainey himself touched upon his enthusiasm for attending such functions in that 1999 interview.

"There was a time when I felt like I was the only one in the country who was still interested in this stuff," he said at the time. "But I found out that there are thousands who feel the same way I do. We stand in line to get the autographs and swap stories and watch the movies, and everyone has a really good time together."

At the same time, however, Rainey lamented the fact that collecting autographs and other memorabilia has become less about making fans happy and more about being just one more high-dollar commercial venture.

As an author, Rainey saw his collection as important from a historical, scholarly viewpoint; as a fan it was important for the joy it had always brought to him on a purely emotional level. But he also recognized - with an admitted sense of distaste - the different type of value such memorabilia holds for some collectors; he noted that the photo of Buck Jones his parents purchased for five cents would no doubt earn many times its original cost, should he have ever decided to sell it. Not that he would have.

"It used to be that celebrities used to just show up and sign autographs," he said. "Today they sell their autographs; they bring their own pictures and they'll sign them for you, but first you have to pay $10 in order to get the picture for them to sign. When they started doing that I kind of lost interest."

As Rainey's reputation as a western writer grew, he sometimes found himself as much in demand as the actors themselves. He became so well-known to serious fans that when a traveling circus came to Tishomingo a number of years ago, the owner – himself a western fan – admitted that one of the reasons he brought the circus here was to give him the chance to meet Rainey.

But Rainey understood that the public's interest when it comes to popular culture can be as fickle as a rancher's daughter in one of those old westerns he so dearly loved. There was a time when westerns were the most popular movies being shown at the local Bijou; for a few years they reigned on television, as well.

But while westerns have never gone completely away, their popularity has waned greatly from the glory days of Gene Autry, Lash LaRue and the Three Mesquiteers.

Which may explain why, on that April afternoon in 1999, Buck Rainey might have been a little uncertain about the eventual fate of the collection he'd spent a lifetime building. It's an uncertainly his son understands.

"I am positive that Daddy never assumed that anyone would be interested in his collection nor did he make arrangements for it to pass to a library," Layne said. "He would never sell any of it, because that's not why he collected. It was a genuine passion."

And that's why Layne is so grateful to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for providing a home for his father's legacy.

"They (the Academy) were absolutely thrilled to receive his collection," Layne said. "I am so thrilled to finally have a home for this important collection. Daddy would be so honored, and I can just see him grinning from ear to ear."

August 9, 1973

Dear Bill:

It was nice to have your letter of August 4. Haven't heard from anyone around Tishomingo for a long, long time. I spent many happy hours in my younger days around Ravia and Tishomingo and had a lot of friends there. However, I have not been back there in several years. Guess most of the guys I knew have either moved away or passed away.

As per your request I am forwarding the two photographs. "The Phantom Empire" is still playing on television in several different cities. I see one of them every now and then. I think it was far ahead of its time when the picture was made.

It is always nice to hear from someone in my part of the country and hope if I am back in Oklahoma sometime this summer I will have an opportunity to meet you.

Most sincerely,

Gene Autry

Paid Obituary

Elbert Loren Jackson

On May 14, 2020, longtime Tishomingo resident Elbert Loren Jackson, 73, passed away at home. Elbert was born April 16, 1947 in Lebanon, Ore., to Bettie and Loren Jackson. He was the oldest of three kids.

Elbert grew up in Oregon, and in 1966 he joined the Navy and served overseas during Vietnam. When he returned home, he was introduced to and married Beverly Jackson in 1969. They had five children together, and he also raised two stepsons; they divorced in 2004.

Elbert was a diesel mechanic, and that's how he supported and grew his family. They traveled the country and lived in many places; he always found the best fishing spots wherever he went. Elbert's life was always an adventure that he enjoyed. He also enjoyed fishing, nature and teaching his children how to fish and be in nature, and also how to love one another and to not sweat the small stuff so much. He was a remarkable man and had a heart of gold for family, friends and strangers alike.

Elbert had many achievements and few disappointments; he lived his life as he wanted to and respected others rights to do so, also. His sense of humor will be very much missed, but talked about by those who knew him and loved him.

Elbert is survived by his children: Elizabeth (Larry) of Indiana, Elbert Jr. (Jesi) of Washington, Phillip (Beth) of Oregon, Jennifer (Rubin, deceased) of Washington, and Craig (Kayleigh) of Oregon; two stepsons, Billy and Andy; and his brother Jerry (Sonja) of South Korea.

Elbert also has 16 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

He was preceded in death by his parents and a sister, Leottie Sant. He is much loved and will be remembered well.

There are no services scheduled at this time. Arrangements have been made under the direction of DeArman-Clark Funeral Home.

Stitt appoints Greene to MSC Board of Regents

Gov. Kevin Stitt has appointed local Tishomingo rancher Dr. Gary Greene to the Murray State College Board of Regents.

Greene's appointment has been confirmed by the Oklahoma Senate, and he will begin serving a seven-year term in June 2020. Greene replaces Regent Dr. Scott Wood.

A Vietnam veteran, he served in the 32nd Army Air.

He completed a degree in Natural Science Education at Southwestern State College. His master's degree in economics was awarded by the University of Missouri. He earned a doctorate in education/economics from Oklahoma State University.

"Gary Greene has been an incredible supporter of Murray State College for many, many years. He most recently served as the chair of our foundation, where he took the lead on a variety of projects," MSC President Joy McDaniel said.

"We welcome him to the board as a creative thinker and dedicated leader. His experience in education and economic development will be valuable assets to the board, students, faculty, staff and community members," McDaniel added.

Greene has spent most of his career in higher education while employed at Oklahoma State University, Kansas State University and the University of Oklahoma, from which he retired after 22 years of service.

He has published over 40 articles in national and regional research journals.

He serves as a board member of the Oklahoma Independent Stock Growers Association.

TMA Board votes to approve payment on sewer project

During a brief meeting of the Tishomingo Municipal Authority Monday evening, board members voted to approve payment to Sapulpa Digging for work related to the city's grant-funded sewer improvement project.

Interim City Manager Janice Cain indicated that the payment of $16,527.40 - to be paid through the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding awarded for the project - represented a final payment before the close-out of the grant begins.

The payment was approved by a vote of 5-0.

Prior to the meeting, members convened as the Tishomingo City Council for a meeting that had no action items on the evening's agenda.

During her report to the council, Cain stated that she will be meeting with the city's various department heads to determine priorities before presenting a budget proposal to the council.

Cain said a public hearing on the budget is being planned for mid-June. She stated that she expects the budget to be a "bare bones" proposal due to reduced city revenues stemming from the COVID-19 pandemic.

"This budget is not going to leave much room for requests," she told the council.

Cain and Councilman Tom Lokey both noted that the city's monthly sales tax revenues from March sales did not show the kind of reduction that city officials had feared.

Both added, however, that they expect city revenues to take a bigger hit once the numbers from April and May come in.

The meeting also featured a brief discussion regarding city clean-up efforts.

Councilwoman Laura Wood asked if such efforts by the Tishomingo Development Team and other organizations could resume now that the city has entered into phased re-opening from the pandemic.

Cain said that they could, but that participants would still be required to maintain social distancing and crowds kept to 10 people or less.

Monday's meeting was the first that all five council members attended in person at City Hall since March.

Both of April's meetings were conducted telephonically via the Zoom platform. This month's first meeting, held on May 4, saw four members take part in person at City Hall, while Vice Mayor Woody Jumper still particiapted via telephone.

'Tour Your Town' event is scheduled for this Saturday

Chamber News

Jordyn Frazier
JCCC Executive Director

This week's industry highlight is on the tourism-related and self-care businesses that were closed for several weeks due to the pandemic.

Most are now back up and running, and taking every precaution they can to keep their customers safe and happy. Please see the provided list of businesses on Page 13 of this week's newspaper.

Interested in winning free money (Chamber Bucks)?

"Tour Your Town" this Saturday. Take a photo at one of these places or post a throwback picture on Facebook; tag the business and the Johnston County Chamber of Commerce using the "@" sign; and share some love about the place or services.

That's it, you're entered to win. Thank you for thinking local!

This week's Member Spotlight is on ROK Realty, owned and operated by Misty Chapman and J.J. Harbert-Self.

These ladies began their friendship when they were just five years old. They attended Tishomingo Public Schools together and graduated in 1994. A few years ago, Misty and J.J. were both at a place in life where they had raised their kids and could spare the extra time to do something new and radical.

In their first year, they were tagged million-dollar-selling agents within their MLS (Multiple List Services).

"MLS are one of the most effective tools realtors can use on behalf of their sellers. Other members can see your home in the system and bring their buyers, thereby increasing your chances of selling," Self explained.

Their first office was in Ardmore, but they have recently relocated it to 105 W. Main Street in Tishomingo, just west of the Tag Agency, to better serve their community.

Misty and J.J. bring experience in property management; business ownership; project management; home staging and design; title and research; new construction; and remodeling to the table.

With their combined talents, energy and enthusiasm, they look forward to serving all of southern Oklahoma.

If you haven't "Liked" their Facebook page, I would highly suggest that you visit. Not only for the beautiful homes they list, but for the organization, design and service tips offered.

"Bringing the business back to our hometown will give us the opportunity to be involved in community activities," Self said.

The Rok Realty team is working on a calendar of events that will bring new, fun, positive activities to residents and clients.

They recently sponsored free snow cones at newly opened Okie Snow and Brew; hosted an Easter egg hunt in April for kids; and have been very involved with the Chamber of Commerce as members.

The Rok Realty team plans to add additional agents within the next year who have the same mindset, with the client being the absolute priority.

"We are new to the business but are not new to service. We promise to be honest in our dealings, to stay true to ourselves, and have fun while doing so. Buying and selling real estate Rok's with us!" they said.

You can contact the team by visiting www.rokrealtor.com, their Facebook page at Rok Realty Team, or calling (580) 465-0451.

Their office hours in Tishomingo are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

It was a Mother's Day to remember for Tishomingo's Bobbie LaFevers, who recorded her first-ever hole-in-one at the Tishomingo Golf Course on Sunday, May 10. LaFevers recorded the shot on Hole 7; shown helping to celebrate the milestone are two of her grandchildren, Katelyn and Kason.

JC Library to offer virtual summer reading program

The Johnston County Library will host a 2020 virtual summer reading program, "Imagine Your Story."

The annual summer reading program will be providing programming through digital channels, such as the libraries' Facebook page and YouTube channel.

Guests can participate in family team challenges, weekly games such as Pictionary and I-Spy; join virtual book clubs; win prizes; and discover so much more during the many online programs beginning in May and continuing throughout the summer months.

"We have virtual programs and entertainment planned for all ages and interests," youth services coordinator Stephanie Way said.

"We hope that this summer reading program will continue to bring our young library users joy and excitement, even though the circumstances are different this year."

All virtual programs are free, but some may have age requirements. Check with your local branch library for more information and dates of events. It's all part of this year's educational and enjoyable summer reading program.

The summer reading program is supported in part by the Institute of Museum and Library Services through the Library Services and Technology Act, administered by the Oklahoma Department of Libraries.

For more information or to pick up a summer reading calendar, contact one of the Southern Oklahoma Library System's branch libraries, including the Johnston County Library, at 371-3006.

Warrant filed in burglary case

An arrest warrant has been filed for a 39-year-old Tishomingo man wanted on felony burglary and larceny charges.

According to documents on file at the Johnston County Court Clerk's office, Robert Earl Conner Jr. has been charged with burglary in the second degree and larceny of an automobile in connection with an incident that reportedly occurred on March 25.

Court documents state that Conner is accused of breaking into PBR Equipment, located at 1530 West Main Street in Tishomingo, by entering into a locked and gated parking lot without permission. Conner then allegedly took a 2007 Chevrolet pickup without the consent of the owner, with the intent of stealing the vehicle.

An affidavit by Officer Kelly Perkinson of the Tishomingo Police Department states that police received a call from dispatchers in Marshall County regarding a truck that had been located in Madill.

Marshall County deputies reportedly asked if the truck had been reported as stolen.

After confirmed with Brandon Blue of PBR Equipment that the vehicle had been stolen, Tishomingo police reportedly reviewed security video showing the theft.

According to the affidavit, the video shows Conner first attempting to take a 2008 model Chevrolet but getting it stuck in the mud before leaving in the 2007 model truck.

The affidavit states that city police went to the Marshall County Jail on March 26 and interviewed Conner, who was being held on other charges and reportedly stated that he didn't remember taking the pickup.

Conner was still being held in the Marshall County Jail at last report. If convicted on the burglary charge filed in Johnston County, he faces a possible sentence of imprisonment for up to seven years.

The larceny charge is punishable by imprisonment for not more than five years, and/or a fine in an amount that is equal to three times the value of the stolen property.

Court records also show that Conner was previously convicted in Murray County in 2011 on a felony charge of third degree arson.

He was reportedly sentenced to 10 years, all suspended except the first 385 days.

Violence prevention services continue

The Chickasaw Nation Department of Family Services continues to offer a place for domestic violence survivors to turn for assistance during the ongoing pandemic.

"Although our day-to-day operations have been modified during this time of pandemic, we are still available to assist those in need," Chickasaw Nation Violence Prevention and Residential Recovery Director Karen Jones said.

Chickasaw Nation Violence Prevention Services offers a toll-free crisis hotline at (855) 405-7645. This line will be answered 24/7 by staff working in the Chickasaw Nation women and children's emergency shelter to assist survivors of domestic and sexual violence.

An advocate is also on call to assist with resources, referrals, admission to emergency shelter, safety planning, emergency transportation, etc.

The coronavirus (COVID-19) has created an environment where domestic abuse survivors might have even more weighing on them.

Social distancing requirements and recommendations at the state and federal levels mean people are spending more time secluded behind closed doors, where domestic abuse occurs.

Meanwhile, the pandemic is taking an emotional, psychological and financial toll on many.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), stress during an infectious disease outbreak can include fear and worry about your own health and the health of your loved ones; changes in sleep or eating patterns; difficulty sleeping or concentrating; worsening of chronic health problems; worsening of mental health conditions; and increased use of alcohol, tobacco or other drugs.

As for financial factors, according to the U.S. Department of Labor, the number of unemployed persons rose to 23.1 million and the unemployment rate increased to 14.7 percent in April. The sharp increases reflect the effects of the coronavirus and efforts to contain it.

Within the 13 counties of the Chickasaw Nation, Violence Prevention Services serves Chickasaws, other American Indians and all members of the community as a public service. Outside of this service area, assistance is still available to Chickasaw citizens.

"If you or someone you know is living in a domestic violence situation and needs help, please call. There are advocates available to listen and connect you to resources. Your safety is important to us," Jones said.

Other domestic violence hotlines include:

- Oklahoma Domestic Violence Hotline - (800) 522-SAFE (7233);
- National Sexual Assault Hotline - (800) 656-HOPE (4673);
- StrongHearts Native Helpline - (844) 7NATIVE; and
- National Domestic Violence Hotline - (800) 799-SAFE

SB 1888

will be $331,830.15, or $27,652.51 per month - approximately 62 percent of the amount the commissioners originally believed they would be receiving.

In a telephone interview with the Sentinel Tuesday morning, Thompson - a former chairman of the ACCO board - admitted he was disappointed to receive less than first believed but added that he was happy to be getting anything at all.

"What they called dividing it equally is actually dividing it based on population," Thompson said. "We're not going to be getting what we thought at first, but it is what it is - I'm not griping.

"Every little bit is going to help us, and we'll make do with what we get. I'm tickled that we'll be getting anything at all, (and) I certainly appreciate all the help our legislators up there who helped take care of us."

Thompson stated that the monthly CIRB appropriations to the counties will begin July 1 and run through June 2021.

The commissioners' business agenda at Monday's meeting included action related to a grant awarded to the county for a street project in Ravia.

Representatives from the Southern Oklahoma Development Authority (SODA) were on hand to present an administrative contract for a $89,675 grant awarded through the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program.

The funds will be used to help fund the planned resurfacing project of approximately 3.75 miles of road in Ravia known as the "railroad loop" beginning at Canada Lane and moving around back to Grand Avenue.

As previously reported in the Sentinel, the county has also been awarded $50,000 through the Rural Economic Action Plan (REAP) grant program for the project. District 3 Commissioner T.J. Clements said Monday that he expects the project to begin sometime this summer.

The commissioners voted 3-0 to approve the administrative contract with SODA. In a related item, they also voted 3-0 to approve a series of "release of funds" documents related to the CDBG grant.
